

Our one show per year, held since 1965, is organized and operated by an all-volunteer committee of Society members. Members and others enter showcases to display minerals, fossils, jewelry they have made, cabochons or faceted stones they have cut and polished, and educational exhibits. About 22 dealers from several states sell a variety of things related to our interests.

Free specimens can further the desire of youngsters to start a collection

Cut and polished stones are here

Home decorator items are shown by some dealers

Demonstrations of Jewelry making are always popular

Income from the show supports scholarships for college students in earth sciences, awards to earth science winners at the Montgomery Area Science Fair, the Eastern Federation Fund (endowment) and specimens for the Gem and Mineral Hall at the National Museum of Natural History of the Smithsonian Institution.

Our reputable dealers bring quality merchandise to meet the needs of buyers

Exhibits of Jewelry interest
Most of our visitors